

1. The first part of the document is a letter from the President of the United States to the Congress, dated January 1, 1861. It is a very important document, as it is the first official communication from the President to the Congress since the inauguration of Abraham Lincoln. The letter is written in a formal, dignified style, and it contains a number of important points. The President begins by expressing his gratitude to the Congress for the honor of his election, and then he proceeds to discuss the state of the Union. He mentions the recent election of a Republican President, and he expresses his confidence that the new administration will be able to carry out its duties in a manner that will be satisfactory to all. He also mentions the recent outbreak of the Civil War, and he expresses his hope that the conflict will be resolved in a peaceful manner. The letter ends with a statement of the President's faith in the future of the United States, and a promise to do his best to serve the people.

2. The second part of the document is a letter from the Vice President of the United States to the Congress, dated January 1, 1861. It is a very important document, as it is the first official communication from the Vice President to the Congress since the inauguration of Abraham Lincoln. The letter is written in a formal, dignified style, and it contains a number of important points. The Vice President begins by expressing his gratitude to the Congress for the honor of his election, and then he proceeds to discuss the state of the Union. He mentions the recent election of a Republican President, and he expresses his confidence that the new administration will be able to carry out its duties in a manner that will be satisfactory to all. He also mentions the recent outbreak of the Civil War, and he expresses his hope that the conflict will be resolved in a peaceful manner. The letter ends with a statement of the Vice President's faith in the future of the United States, and a promise to do his best to serve the people.